You don't need a mountain-man beard, a plaid shirt, or a lumberjack axe to be a Wilderness Guide; all that's required is a keen sense of adventure and a knack for survival. When the going gets tough, you must know how to shepherd a group through the dangers of the backcountry. When a client needs to get through difficult terrain, or maybe a few adventurous campers want an alternative holiday break, you strap on your hiking boots, grab your hunting knife, and lead the way into the wilderness.
