Salut Galarneau! (1967), by Jacques GODBOUT, is cast in the first person as the diary of François Galarneau, a working-class rebel who owns and operates a hot-dog stand in the Montréal suburb of Île-Perrot. Interweaving the story of his "failed" personal life, narrated piecemeal and randomly, and his "naïve" observations about his society, conveyed by the author with satiric insight and poetic power, Galarneau's diary is begun as a pastime suggested by his mistress but ...

Le thème de la solitude est un sujet récurant dans le livre de Jacques Godbout, Salut Galarneau?. C'est en trois partie-partie de la vie de François Galarneau- où la solitude est au cœur de son existence. Par cette répétition de ce thème qui, d'après moi est dominant, Godbout paraphrase, comme Camus (dans son livre l'étranger),...

Jacques Godbout, OC, CQ (born November 27, 1933) is a Canadian novelist, essayist, children's writer, journalist, filmmaker and poet. By his own admission a bit of a dabbler (touche-à-tout), Godbout has become one of the most important writers of his generation, [citation needed] with a major influence on post-1960 Quebec intellectual life.

"Salut Galarneau!" takes a real plunge into life in the 70s in Montreal. Complete with cultural, political and economical references, the ever-present fatalist mentality, the malfunctioning family, the grandiose writer dream, and of course a healthy dose of Godboutian black humour, this is a novel to be reread many a time, analyzed and properly dissected.

Galarneau, québécois parmi d'autres, a équipé un vieil autobus pour en faire une baraque à " chiens chauds ", ce que nous les Français nous appelons des " hot dogs " (rires). Il a un cœur gros comme une maison, ce qui ne l'empêche pas de courir le cœur du monde, tout autant que les rues, les amis, les rêves, pendant que sa femme couche avec des hommes mieux habillés et certainement moins rêveurs (pleurs). Alors Galarneau écrit des poèmes et fait murer sa maison. Question : jusqu'où iront ses rêves ?

In examining a number of francophone Montréal novels from 1960 to 2005, this interdisciplinary study considers the ways in which these connect with material landscapes to produce a city of neighbourhoods. In so doing, it reflects on how Montréal has been seen as both home and not home for francophone Quebecers. Morgan offers an overview of the fiction; examines micro and macro geographies of Montréal, and identifies some key literary trends. In so doing, it reflects on the importance of the imaginary in our experiencing and understanding of the urban.

As a comparative study which includes the analysis of both English-Canadian and Quebec novels, this book provides an overview of the novel as it has developed in this country since the Second World War. Focusing on narratological rather than thematic elements, the book represents a systematic application of the insights and analytical tools of reader-reception theory, in particular the models proposed by Wolfgang Iser and Hans Robert Jauss. Placing the emphasis on the text and its effects rather than on the historical or psycho-sociological genesis of the text, the author invokes the models and paradigms of other literatures to establish a broader cultural context permitting the significance of a literature to emerge as a carrier of meaning in and beyond the culture that produces it. Tracing a critical path from Hugh MacLennan's hierarchic romance structures and Gabrielle Roy's social realism to the metafiction of Hubert Aquin and Timothy Findley, the author reveals that the novel's narratological features themselves are often closely linked with ideological positions.
